

Wool Sourcing Guide Vietnam

WOOLMARK

VIETNAM

Vietnam is currently ranked as the 3rd largest exporter of textiles and garments world-wide. The textile industry employs about three million workers in 6,000 factories. Once mainly a cut and sew market, Vietnam now boasts a robust supply chain including spinning, weaving, knitting and whole garment manufacturing. This vertical integration means designers, brands and buyers can source all their garment requirements from the one country, cutting out logistical times and dealing with many suppliers across different markets.

The United States is the primary destination for Vietnamese apparel and textiles, making up 47.5% of Vietnam's total exports in 2022. This evidences Vietnam's strong relationship with the American market. Other major importers of Vietnamese textiles and garments include the European Union, Japan, South Korea and China.

Knitwear is the largest export product category, comprising 42.5% of Vietnam's total textile and garment exports in 2022. Woven apparel, footwear and bags are among the other significant export product categories contributing to the industry's diverse portfolio.

Vietnam has strong preferential trade agreements, such as the Regional Comprehensive Economic Partnership and the European Union-Vietnam Free Trade Agreement. Because of these multilateral agreements, the country continues to be an ideal sourcing destination for much of Europe. Political stability in the one-party state also supports the continuation of the country's growth policy, while laws enacted in 2018 have significantly reduced corruption. There is currently a push in the industry to improve its sustainability credentials and the EU's Eco-design for Sustainable Products Regulation (ESPR) is set to come into full effect next year (2025).

Wool has been manufactured in Vietnam for more than 10 years, mainly in a knitting capacity until 2019 when Vietnam's first wool spinning mill opened. Currently there are three other wool spinning mills being built in the country with plans to be operational in 2025 and 2026, helping to cement Vietnam as an even more ideal wool sourcing hub in the near future.

THE WOOLMARK COMPANY AND VIETNAM

The Woolmark Company (TWC) first started to make inroads into the Vietnam textile industry in 2012. Since then, we have been working closely with partners throughout the supply chain and currently collaborate with more than 90 partners including flatbed knitters, circular knitters and garment making companies. We have transferred technical knowhow about the manufacturing of wool products, disseminated information about sources of raw materials, chemicals and machines, and organised international trade missions to connect our project partners with buyers. In recent years TWC has worked with domestic brands to produce their first wool collections which have successfully sold in the domestic market.

TWC will continue to focus on Vietnam's supply chain through education, product development, connectivity, and export and domestic markets, and look forward to watching this market grow.

YOUNGONE NAMDINH CO LTD

YoungOne began manufacturing sportswear and down jackets in Seongnam, South Korea just over 40 years ago. In 2003, they opened their factory in Nam Dinh, Vietnam and established Designer Textiles Vietnam. To further enhance their capabilities and to encourage and support vertical manufacturing, the materials division was launched, and they now produce both woven and knit fabrics as well as a variety of insulations that are vertically integrated into the manufacturing process. Currently this factory produces fabrics and garments for companies such as Lululemon, North Face, Patagonia and Helly Hansen.

In 2019, YoungOne partnered with The Woolmark Company to run the Innovation Workshop at their Nam Dinh facility. Over the course of five days, four innovative sports and leisure wear brands were given the opportunity to work closely with the YoungOne textile technicians and their world class facilities to create fabrics using knitting machines (Shima Seiki and Stoll) and circular knitting machines as well as receive assistance from garment makers to complete fully formed garments. As part of the brief, all fabrications had to contain at least 50% wool and would be subject to testing for Woolmark licensing.

The workshop harnessed the creativity of innovative individuals and brands and gave them the chance to tap into the vast knowledge of The Woolmark Company and YoungOne to create interesting and innovative structures that push the limits of wool and could be commercialised in the sports and performance wear markets.
